LOCAL DEMENTIA GROUP CHEQUE IN AT THE NOTTINGHAM'S NEW-LOOK LOUTH BRANCH

A Louth dementia support group connected to the town's Trinity Centre have received £250 from The Nottingham's branch team.

Trinity Centre representative Jayne Pegg was presented with a cheque at the building society's new-look branch on Market Place, which reopened to the public recently following refurbishment.

Branch manager Tara Waters said: "We celebrated reopening by inviting some long-time members along for a VIP tour, and we wanted to build on that by highlighting our ongoing commitment to our local community.

"As a branch team we decided a £250 donation to help the group would be the perfect gesture and we are very proud to have been able to do so.

"The fantastic events they organise for people with dementia have been on hold in recent times due to the Covid pandemic, but it's fantastic that they are up and running again.

"Our contribution will help the charity arrange things such as flower arranging, bingo sessions, trips out, coffee afternoons and lunches."

The Nottingham's new-look branch is a Covid-19 secure and compliant environment that includes integrated protective screens, hand sanitising facilities, guidance on distancing and electronic door locks that can be utilised to control customer flow (if required).

The building society offers savings accounts, mortgage advice and estate agency services provided by Belvoir. There is also a wide choice of additional offerings via expert partners including funeral planning, financial advice and home insurance.
