MINDSPACE STAMFORD CHARITY RECEIVE £400 DONATION FROM THE NOTTINGHAM

Stamford-based mental health and wellbeing charity MindSpace has received a welcome boost at the start of 2022 in the form of a £400 donation from a local building society.

Over the Christmas period the The Nottingham's Stamford branch team nominated MindSpace for a share of £10,000 being given to deserving local causes from its recently launched Samuel Fox Foundation.

Funds from the foundation, which is named after the building society's founder, will support projects and causes that help communities thrive.

MindSpace trustee Helen Howe said: "I'd like to say a big thank you to The Nottingham - we really appreciate their support.

"Every donation makes a difference, of course, but one of this amount could cover some supplies for our Tea and Chat sessions for a year, or train and support five more volunteer listeners."

Julie Smith, branch manager at The Nottingham in Stamford, added: "I'm really proud to work for a company that actively encourages and empowers its teams to support organisations that matter most in our community.

"We're over-the-moon to be able to make such a significant contribution to MindSpace – they're a fantastic local charity and we are happy our donation will help make a difference for many people who need and deserve our support."
